Syspine Receives Prestigious Industry Awards Partnership with Microsoft Proves a Winner

(RENO, Nev., March 11, 2008) — The newest addition to the small business phone market – the Syspine® Digital Operator Phone System from Quanta Computer – has already earned two distinguished industry awards. VON Magazine and Internet Telephony have both recognized the innovative Syspine phone system as among the industry’s best.

The Syspine system is an advanced IP phone system featuring Microsoft® (Nasdaq: MSFT) Response Point™ phone system software. Designed for companies with one to 50 employees, Syspine was created for ease of use, low costs and integration with other technologies. It features a powerful voice-recognition system that can be linked with a company’s internal phone directory, as well as an individual’s Microsoft Office Outlook® address book.

On March 5, the Syspine system received a 2008 VON Magazine Innovator Award, which is the foremost listing of innovative companies that represent the future of the Internet Communications industry.

“The VON Magazine Innovator Awards recognize the Internet Communications industry’s best and brightest companies, and we’re pleased to include Syspine as an inaugural winner,” said Bill Sell, Publisher, VON Media Group. “Companies like Quanta Computer should take pride in their accomplishments, because the selection committee unanimously felt as though the Syspine system stood apart from the large field of nominations.”

Cited for “excellence while addressing real needs in the marketplace,” the Syspine system was also recently lauded as “Product of the Year” by Internet Telephony Magazine, which has been serving the VoIP industry for the past decade.

“It is a great honor to be recognized by these illustrious publications,” said Mike Yang, Vice President of Quanta Computer, Inc. “It is very rewarding to see so many hard-working people collaborate on such a smart product like Syspine and then get acknowledged for their efforts by respected industry magazines.”
